Eddy Van Lieu's explosive vitality explodes onto our stage with an energy all of his own. He cuts a razor-sharp path through music history, with a powerful, gutsy, melodic sensibility. What was fresh and new for him in the 1970s became signature work in the 1980s, 1990s, and 2000s, but not only in numbers: E.V.Lieu was one of the first musicians to let his music do the talking. A complete, rich, and compelling style emerged out of his search for identity and self-expression.

Eddy's innate musicality, his gift for melody, and his limitless improvisational skill offer the listener the pleasure of becoming an active participant in the artist's work and a partner in the unfolding story. A central feature of his performance is his "instrument," a cardboard box with piano keys resting on top that he uses to express his intentions in the moment. E.V.Lieu also likes to incorporate pieces by Claude Debussy and Ravel into his routine. His renditions are as atmospheric as they are direct. Eddy is honored to be a part of the Blue Note family, and we welcome him back.

Blues Player is a Music Minus One system which sounds fantastic on any PC, but if you have a Mac, it still works fine, as it doesn't support Music Minus One. It only needs a Windows PC to be able to play music. It has all the features of a normal System Tray Audio Player, but this time the music will always play by itself, even when not in use. Blues Player is a unique and revolutionary way of learning the blues. With Blues Player you will have plenty of time for listening and learning how to play the blues. All you have to do is to design your own band consisting of drums, bass, piano or all three instruments, and choose a 12 bar blues arrangement. You will play this track over and over again, but as you do, the track will get bigger, richer and more authentic. It will also sound better than with normal music on a CD. Features: Play the drums, bass, piano or all three instruments together. Add your own solo over the tracks. Add your own background music to the environment. Add your own band. Play instruments you can choose. Combine up to 8 tracks. Download and play the tracks via USB/FireWire, memory stick or via internet. The system supports a large database of backing tracks, which you can use to train your skills. The system will produce a unique sound and a unique performance every time you play it. Randomize the arrangements. Include guitar/bass/drums. Choose all tracks at once. Add tracks during the performance. Play time signatures and octaves. Extract notes from the environment. Play note and chords. Each track has an individual tempo. Tempo is automatically adjusted based on the volume. Limit the quantity of time or playing sessions. You can add new music or remove music or more features and updates! Support mp3 or flac and check FAQ. Other MusicM4K v

What's New In Blues Player?

Blues Player is a unique and revolutionary solution of learning how to play blues music. Blues Player is a Music Minus One system that runs on every Windows PC. By running such a system on the computer instead of a normal CD player, you get a lot of benefits and features that simply isn't possible on traditional hi-fi equipment. Normally Music Minus One consists of some sheet material and a cd with static music tracks that sounds the same every time you play them. When practising to the music you have to start and play the same piece of music over and over again, so in the long run the music gets boring. With Blues Player things are different. First of all you design your own band consisting of either drums, bass, piano or all three instruments together. The system plays a 12 bar blues scheme over and over again, but each instrument consists of a lot of variations of the 12 bar blues. This means that every time the blues is repeated it will sound a bit different than the previous performance. This gives a more authentic feeling of playing with a live band. Limitations: 5 days trial. When hearing the Blues for the first time there are a few things that pops into your mind; Canned corn and gumbo. But I'm not sure how I feel about canned corn and gumbo when it comes to the blues. That said, a lot of people have never heard the blues before, and I'm one of them. Not only that, but a lot of people that have heard it before claim that they love it because it's a staple part of American history. But when it comes to some traditions, I'm not so sure. There's a moment in the early 20th century where the Blues was a massive part of music. The best-selling song of all time, "When the Saints Come Marching In," was a Blues song. It's sounds like a hymn, but it's a Blues song. "Oh What a Beautiful Mornin" was also an iconic Blues song, and I still enjoy this song today. But the Blues is not the only music to make it to the charts, and the Blues is not the only music to be played in the United States. There are a number of other genres of music that are played in the United States, but the Blues is the most popular.
