Do you have an achingly dull desktop? Maybe a photo you haven't updated for ages or you just want something a little different? Well, with this script you can change your desktop background to something completely random! This little tool will search for images in a folder and if it finds one it will change your desktop background to the image. You can specify the time interval (how many minutes) between each new image. Images can be a single image, a series of images in a folder, or you can even use a single multi-image to display. When you are done you can also specify the directory where the images are located. Specify one or more directories to search in and it will search the specified directories for images. If there are more than one directory, you can specify a group of directories that will be searched together. You can even use wildcards to specify directories. If you want to search for a single file it will do that. The images can be single files or they can be a folder with multiple images. You can use all of the images or just one, or even mix images and single files. The images can be any size or they can be specific sizes, and you can even specify the image types. You can even use the same image for several times, by setting the Repeat Images option in the settings menu. It is even possible to select the image to be displayed on the desktop. What's more, you can even specify the image size to be displayed. In addition, you can even set the image to be centered or you can use the Tile Images option to change the image to a tiled display. You can even use the Banner Images option to display a banner image on the desktop. Quick Templates is a wizard-like software application that allows you to make desktop icons and Quick Launch menu entries easily. Random Wallpaper Changer is an application that will change your desktop background at random times. It can even change your desktop background to any one of a large number of BMP files in your Windows\System32 folder. I've only been using it for an hour or so, but I think it's a pretty cool application. You can go to the program's About box and see the information it provides. P.S. Actually, the information provided isn't quite as good as that...you can't select the image type (JPG, GIF, PNG, etc.) as you can in the Changer. 01-08-2005 mgkmax99 Quote: Originally posted by oskarol Bump for me that I've found a solution to my need for a good random desktop wallpaper changer! Cheers, OSKAROL The Program looks good, this is a very simple and easy to use tool, I've been using the tool for awhile now and it's very fast. I've been looking for a while to find a random desktop wall poster type of program. I'm having some problems with the thing though. When you change the desktop background, it'll change to the specified image, but not for the specified time, the time limit is until I close the program down. For example, say it's a picture of a sunset, and the time is set to 10 minutes. If I click the icon, the desktop background will change to the sunset for the 10 minutes, but if I quit the program and let it run again, it'll change to the sunset again. That is what I need help with, changing the time that it stays for. 02-12-2005 OSKAROL Oh, but here's the answer I was looking for, from the random wallpaper changer manual: "The program does not use a timer for changing the wallpaper. The timer is only used to start the program. The random number generator is used to generate an ID. This ID is stored and the program uses this to start the function that changes the wallpaper." And that is where I ran into a problem, because it doesn't start the program at a set time, but rather starts it at a random time. So the answer was the random number generator. Great
