Category:Software companies based in California Category:AutodeskQ: Copy data from one table to another table with respect to some column I want to copy data from one table to another table with respect to some column. I want to add values from column "a" from "table1" to column "b" in "table2" then write result in "table1". I do this: `INSERT INTO Table2 SELECT a, b, c, d, e FROM Table1` But I want to add

"Table1.a" values to Table2.b values How can I do that? A: You can do it with CROSS APPLY: Insert into table2 (columnb, columnc, columnd, columne) Cross apply (Select "Table1", a, b, c, d, e from table1) t Note: if a.columnb not exist in Table2, you can use cross apply like this Insert into table2 (columb, columnc, columnd, columne) Select t.columb, t.columnc, t.columnd, t.columne from (SELECT "Table1", a, b, c, d, e from table1) as t When, many years ago, I worked in a solicitor's office, I remember mentioning to my employer the fact that I always worked on my Saturdays and Sundays. He looked at me somewhat disdainfully and said: 'You are so funny. I know lots of women like to work on the weekend, but for me I don't feel I can concentrate at all on a problem which I have to hand in on a Monday morning.' I laughed and said: 'You're just a man.' He wasn't amused. I think he really believed that weekends were, for men, a period of the year when it is bad to get anything done. Today, I really have to laugh at this view. In our modern world, technology has enabled us to be more productive, whether at work, on our own or with our family. We can communicate with anyone around the world instantaneously and it is 1cb139a0ed
