The Multicenter Myasthenia Gravis Foundation of America Clinics With More Than 50 Years of Experience. We reviewed the files of patients who were treated for myasthenia gravis between 1952 and 2013 at the 12 practices that comprised the Myasthenia Gravis Foundation of America (MGFA) clinics with more than 50 years of experience. Among the 760 patients reviewed, 442 (59%) were female, and the median age at onset was 42 years (range 5 to 88). Most patients were examined or treated by neurologists (n = 583; 78%). The annual number of reported myasthenia gravis cases treated per practice ranged from 2 (n = 13) to 84 (n = 1). Comprehensive clinical information, including a neurologic examination, was available for 677 patients. Among the patients tested for acetylcholine receptor antibodies (n = 201), at least 1 titer was available for 391 of those evaluated; 101 patients (26%) had

Delphi.Q: When did the Romans use black blood in the Roman "Elixir"? The Roman Emperor Nero died after eating a black-colored elixir, supposedly to prevent himself from suffering from his symptoms of epilepsy. Does a reference exist to when the Romans used such a black-colored elixir? A: The most common opinion is that it was offered as a remedy to the emperor. It is mentioned in both Pliny the Elder (c. 25-79 CE) and Galen (c. 130-200 CE) but only together with ingredients clearly meant to cure epilepsy. Pliny writes The secret of this dilation of veins is due to the epiretinal application of the drug called nigrum, which not only stifles and paralyses the motion of the brain, but also in the facial regions leads to the dilation of vessels which are otherwise not extended, and by this means attacks the blood when it is circulating in the ears, or rather when it is returning from them, before it passes back through the brain and the veins of the forehead; the swelling of the cheeks is also put an end to by the application of the nigrum. For as the nigrum flows into them and eats into the soft part of their substance, it would certainly engorge the veins of the cheeks and forehead if it were not for the fact that the
