From #5 "Patch Notes" on Linux/Mac. Changes to the patch includes the following. Monitoring endoplasmic reticulum stress with the fluorescent reporter XBP1. X-box binding protein-1 (XBP1) is a critical component of the endoplasmic reticulum (ER) unfolded protein response (UPR), which is important for cell viability and organ homeostasis. Here, we used the XBP1 consensus sequence GGGUUG as a reporter for monitoring ER stress in living cells. We established a range of small hairpin RNA (shRNA) and fluorescent protein (FP)-fusion constructs to monitor the PERK-dependent UPR in the ER. We demonstrate that our system is robust, sensitive, and allows analysis of cell-cell variability, and a simple ER stress readout can be readily performed in living cells. Gooseberry and Mint
