The goal of Concealer is to hide valuable information into a safer place. It is particularly useful for hiding files in a proprietary database. The data to be hidden, a file to be hidden, is encrypted and saved in a decoy file. The latter is kept in a safe place, you may decide where. The file to be hidden remains accessible to the software. The secret of Concealer is that even if the decoy file is removed or altered, the encrypted data remains inaccessible. Concealer Compatibility: Windows XP, Windows Vista, Windows 7, Windows 8, Windows 8.1, Windows 10 In Windows XP to Windows 10, both 32 and 64 bits, both 32 and 64 bits. The Windows 10 32 bits version is a 64 bits edition. Source code is available at GitHub repository. FAQ Installation How do I install Concealer? When you select the installation folder for Concealer, simply click "Run" button to start the installation of the software. Additional details and general help can be found in our on-line manual. How to start Concealer? To start Concealer simply double click on the decoy file, it will open and the data will be accessible. How to enable the decoy file menu? The decoy file menu is hidden by default. To show it: 1. Right click on the file you want to open. 2. Select "Open As..." then "Select Folder". 3. Select "Browse" 4. Select the folder where the decoy file is located, the software will be able to launch it. How to change the decoy file name? By default the software uses the decoy file name as name for the encryption key. You may change the decoy file name if you wish. 1. Select a file to be used as encryption key. 2. Right click on the selected file and select "Properties". 3. Change the "Name" in the General tab. How to use the decoy file as a password? The decoy file cannot be opened directly by an ordinary user. Only a software like Concealer can open it. The program uses the decoy file name as a password to open the file. The decoy file can be renamed with the ".asc" extension, but you need to prevent the file name to be altered with an ASCII code. How to delete the decoy file? If you wish to

What's New In?

Concealer is the ultimate file protection tool. You can protect any file and any folder with the Concealer. The Concealer hides the original file into a decoy file with a new name. It creates an overlay of the two files without affecting the original file. It's like creating a stand-in for the original file, a decoy file. To protect an existing file you just double-click it and select a decoy file from the result list. You can also choose a folder to protect. All you need is a normal file explorer (at least Microsoft Explorer) and the Concealer. Besides all the features explained above a special characteristic is the way in which the decoy file is handled. It's not a simple hidden file, but rather a decoy file. A decoy file is even allowed to be opened by your system. When a concealed file is opened a small overlay is shown over the original file. You can easily open this file since it doesn't require any additional manipulation (like a magic trick) to be revealed. Besides the decoy file protection Concealer provides: - Checksum -... and other features The folder has been encrypted. Your original folders are not decrypted so the data is still safe. Reduce disk space usage: Data is split into several smaller chunks for speed and reduction of disk usage. Decrypting and encrypting a larger file consumes more resources, so it's a good idea to encrypt small files. Encryption algorithms: - AES (symmetric) - Triple DES - Blowfish - SAFER - DES - IDEA - RC2 - RC4 - Camellia Release Notes 18 Apr 2011: - Windows 7: fixed Macros not creating the decoy file - Windows 8: fixed Safe / Source passwords - Windows 7 and Windows 8: improved decoy name checking - Mac OS X: removed unsupported decoy file suffixes - Mac OS X: fixed the checked decoy files in the new version of the application - Mac OS X: Windows protection support - Renamed Windows 7 installer to concealer.exe - fixed: "start, install and pack" bug - fixed: The application does not display an error message when the correct decoy file is not found - fixed: data is encrypted as one of the first steps. This ensures the data is cryptographically secure. - added: iOS support
