A: This isn't proper use of regular expressions, but it does produce a simple solution that will work.
Note: Requires that your data is consistent. The code is fragile, but it will work in most cases. You will need to paste the text you want to remove into notepad, then save it as a.txt file. If your data isn't consistent, it will be somewhat tedious to generate the code, and it's going to produce worse results than using a regex. In notepad go to Edit -> Substitute. Replace all occurrences of the following text with your regex: [^][^] stands for the anything but one character. The output in notepad should be similar to this: Full content in notepad, pasted into this forum: crackaston2041
