The plasma levels of many trace elements, such as iron, zinc and copper, are decreased in various types of atherosclerotic disease. The purpose of this paper is to summarize the relevant literature on the role of trace elements in the development of atherosclerosis, focusing on the cellular mechanisms involved in the formation of atherosclerotic lesions. Cell culture and animal models show that iron, zinc and copper deficiency lead to decreased synthesis of apolipoprotein B and very low density lipoprotein. Iron, zinc and copper also induce genes that modify lipid and lipoprotein metabolism and decrease the synthesis of neutral lipids and cholesteryl esters. Most important, all these trace elements (iron, zinc and copper) modulate the transcription of genes involved in cholesterol homeostasis, and this may contribute to the atherogenic and thrombotic properties of iron, zinc and copper deficiency. In conclusion, micronutrients have an important role in the atherosclerotic process. The studies reviewed here have important implications for the clinical management of patients with atherosclerotic disease.Q: Can I use a component with the same name as a name of a function? I have a component called SelectionBox, which I use to let the user select a file from my computer. I'm trying to implement it so that the user can also select a file by typing it's name. I have a function, called SelectFile, which takes a file as an argument, and returns a string for the user to input. The problem is, I can't have two components called SelectionBox. They would conflict with each other. Is there a way I can create this component? Or do I need to put it in its own folder and have it accessible like MyProject\Components\FileSelector\SelectionBox? A: Yes, this is

, Maine Rabbit Island is a town on the coast of Maine, located in York County, Maine, United States. The population was 691 at the 2010 census. History Rabbit Island is the largest island in the state of Maine. It is connected to the mainland by Beaver Harbor (a harbor), which is a wide inlet in this connection. It is known for a controversial herring fishery during the late 19th century and early 20th century, which caused the demise of the local Indian tribe. The island got its name from the fact that Island's several islands consist mainly of large boulders. Fishery Rabbit Island was once a relatively important herring fishery. It also once had an increased number of birds nesting on the islands, particularly sea ducks. By the 1920s, the herring had declined in intensity, something the islanders accepted knowing that it was a somewhat natural process. Aided by the harsh winter weather, the sea birds that nest on Rabbit Island, as well as at other Islands along Beaver Harbor, tend to remain at their nests from spring to summer, and winter to spring, with the winter being longer than spring. In the winter months of 1953 to 1956, a study was conducted to determine the nesting habits of the common terns (Sterna hirundo) and barnacles (family Scorpaenidae) on Rabbit Island. The terns continue to live on the island all year. Archaeology Archaeological sites such as the Wessagusset Island occupation site were on Rabbit

Island at least 300 years before the town of Deer Isle and the main town of Deer Isle. The Wessagusset site consists of a ditched pit that was inhabited from around 500 to 700 AD. It has been studied by a series of archeology finds by Dr. Lawrence W. Hendrickson. It is largely because of the archeological research (while on the island before the herring fishery decline) by Lawrence Hendrickson that allowed the creation of the first tourism focus in all of Maine. In November 1979, a duct of the site was examined. This was when Thomas Kerlin of the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service and Hendrickson were on the island; Kerlin said that the duct or tunnel was "a natural funnel for the eels and menhaden that had trapped in the chamber." He also said that the ducts were large enough for a small child to

Q: IntStream.range() to split two byte array into two List in Java 8 Hi I am trying to split two byte array into two List in Java 8. I already used, ByteArrayOutputStream bytearrayOutputStream=new ByteArrayOutputStream(); IntStream.range(0,size).. I am wondering if there is any method using IntStream? A: You can use IntStream.rangeClosed(lower, upper) along with IntStream.generate(IntSupplier) like so // Convert to an ArrayList IntStream.rangeClosed(0, size).generate(i -> i < size / 2? ByteUtils.doubleToByteArray(data1[i]) : ByteUtils.doubleToByteArray(data2[i - size / 2])).limit(size / 2).toArray() If the size is odd then it might be something a bit more complicated depending on your data. Toxic effects of bisphenol A on the development of the cave fish Phreatichthys proximus. The H-enantiomer of 2,2-bis(4-hydroxyphenyl)propane (Bisphenol A) (BP-A) is widely used as monomer in the synthesis of polycarbonate. It is also used as a pigment in coating and paper processing. Human exposure to BP-A can occur through ingestion, inhalation, dermal absorption and after contact with skin and body tissues. The aim of this work was to study the natural exposure and toxicity of BP-A in an aquatic environment. Four groups of microinjected adult female and 4 groups of naturally spawned eggs were treated with different concentrations of BP-A. Development, hatching and morpho-anatomical changes were examined. Development was reduced in eggs treated with 80 or 160 microg L(-1)of BP-A in adults and in embryos exposed for 3 h during natural spawning. In a second set of experiments a developmental morphological analysis was done in embryos exposed for 4h during natural spawning. Hatching was affected by maternal treatment with 160 microg L(-1) of BP-A for 4 hours during spawning. Some embryos were not able to detach the yolk sac. Effects
