Soil chemical properties of various experimental sites were investigated to determine the effectiveness of fertilizers on such properties in order to assess the suitability of different land for cultivation and to predict the effect of different fertilizers on the amount of water that is available for evaporation. Half of the farmers applied the recommended amounts of nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P) and potassium (K) and half applied more than the recommended amounts. Soil pH, electrical conductivity (EC), cation exchange capacity (CEC), exchangeable bases (BE) and oxides of P and K were measured. Results indicated that soils at different sites and treatment were different in soil chemical properties and responded differently to fertilizers.
