[url= surgery for malignant bone tumors of the extremities. Surgical and local therapies have made great advances over the past 2 decades in the treatment of malignant bone tumors in children and young adults. With the introduction of alternative treatment modalities for most low-grade sarcomas, more patients with tumors of the extremities have become candidates for limb-salvage surgery as the initial approach for these tumors. Surgical indications and timing of presentation are more restrictive now than in the past, and it is now often impossible to cure patients with lesions that were initially considered unresectable because of site or size alone. The combination of patient age, initial oncologic considerations, and surgical surgical factors have significantly changed over the past 30 years in the choice of surgical approach to limb-sparing surgery for malignant tumors of the extremity. Although there are several acceptable options, the optimal approach for achieving limb salvage remains controversial.Caltex Socceroos head coach Ange Postecoglou says James Jeggo has agreed a move to Adelaide United FC. Jeggo is now a free agent after his spell at Western Sydney Wanderers was cut short last week. The 23-year-old is aiming for an A-League return and has been training with the club ahead of contract talks. "We've agreed a deal with James and he will be a member of the squad," Postecoglou told the Daily Telegraph. "We are trying to finalise the deal but that's not an easy thing to do. We just want to make sure he is in Adelaide before we finalise anything." James Jeggo is contracted to Western Sydney Wanderers but has been training with Adelaide United ahead of contract talks. Credit:Getty Images Jeggo joined the Wanderers from Celta Vigo last August for just $1.75 million and was top goalscorer of the Hyundai A-League last season. But a run of bad form and a 12-match ban for spitting at Melbourne City's Travis d'Arnaud allowed Melbourne Victory to goad the contract into the hands of Western Sydney chairman

Our heroes are merfolk--of varying types. Each has a secret to hide. Each has a dream to achieve. M Inspired by The Book of Amos, this interactive narrative poem is set in 16th century England. Your choices control the story. Play as the young 16-year-old protagonist, here called Mara. Agree with your mother’s abusive marauders that you’re a witch, or escape capture with the help of your animal familiars. Decide what being a witch means to you, with over 100 unique endings, including 4 diary entries at key moments in the story. You’ll meet witches who lust for power, witches who fear it, and witches who are torn between them. You’ll get to make choices that define their character. Agree with your mother or choose to defy her. Play as your familiars, the tiny magical animals that help you escape your family’s grasp. Choose how to treat your familiars, from the defiant companion you name "Dor" to the wise and patient familiars who teach you to find safety and wisdom in a foreign land. About The Game: Do you recognize the myths or fables that inspire you, the magic and love and beauty that captivate you? This short interactive fiction story is set in 16th-century England and lets you live with the villain and hero in one life-changing decision. About the Author: Jordan L. Smith is a 2009 graduate of the University of Pittsburgh School of Law with a bachelor's degree from the same institution in Medieval Studies, with minors in history and physics. His work has appeared in publications including the UK's "Literary Review" and the US' "Poetica", the latter of which called his first short story, "Songs in the Night", "A magnificent debut" and called his second story, "The Happiness of Being the Enemy", "A breathtaking story". Additionally, Jordan has been recognized by Poetica as being one of their "Unsigned Guest Writers to Watch". About the Illustrator: Craig Camp is a freelance illustrator and animator with experience in graphic design, character modeling, animation and conceptual art. He enjoys drawing flowers and castle ruins, and is a huge fan of western art, mythology and fantasy films. You can find his art work on deviantArt or visit his website. What's new in Hexagourds:

(Cucurbitaceae), pumpkin (Cucurbitaceae), lettuce (Lactuca sativa), and alfalfa (Medicago sativa) are among the major host species of soybean aphids (Hemiptera, Aphididae; HSA) in North America ([@iew030-B3]). These aphids prefer to remain in Cucurbitaceae at very low densities during the summer ([@iew030-B4], [@iew030-B1]). In the fall, however, they disperse rapidly to flower species of the legume family, including soybean (Glycine max), zoysiagrass (Zoysia spp.), Bermuda grass (Cynodon dactylon), annual ryegrass (Lolium spp.), and redroot pigweed (Amaranthus retroflexus) ([@iew030-B3]). Their over-wintering population surge is attributed to a change in host preference toward non-Cucurbitaceae species as temperatures drop ([@iew030-B13]). It is presumed that an increase in body size results in the shorter time needed to detect flowers; a finding confirmed by experiments in the laboratory ([@iew030-B7]). Despite changes in host preference or host plant re-invasion, HSA control in the fall remains challenging to many large-scale producers. The complicated timing of whiteflies and other aphids throughout the county during the fall means that there is often a shortage of attacking aphid taxa. Allochroia bioccana (Green) of the family Aleyrodidae also infests American elm, Ulmus americana ([@iew030-B8]), and is one of the most abundant parasitoids of the HSA in northeastern states ([@iew030-B10]). The parasitoid impact on HSA in the winter should prove important, not only because of the considerable density of the whitefly--aphid complex during winter ([@iew030-B12]) but also because of their different incisivolateral oviposition behavior on the American elm ([@iew030-B8]). In North America, aphids have been classified into generalist (groups 1 and 2) and generalist--sit-and-wait aphids (groups 3 to 6) ([@iew030-B18]). Green
