The file will look something like this: /Users/me/Library/LaunchAgents/me.plist Second, you need to make sure that.bash_profile is available in the file system. You can check this by running ls -ld /Users/me/Library/LaunchAgents/me.plist. If it's not there, you have some other plist(s) that launchd is using as its start up script. You can usually identify this by running launchctl list -p | grep me.plist. A: The other solution is to directly edit the.plist file with sudo launchctl edit. To edit your.bash_profile: sudo launchctl edit /Library/LaunchAgents/me.sh The output may look like this:
