Mayor Nutter, however, stuck to his original choice, a civil engineer and administrator who had previously worked for the state and federal governments. William "Buddy" Tomkins, who is trained to manage large, complex organizations, has no business experience in education. But now, his selection is in trouble. Mr. Tomkins' is suing the Teaching Union of Philadelphia, and the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers, for mischaracterizing the appointment process to bolster anti-union messaging. The union is appealing to the court to rule that the mayor's reliance on the anti-union opinions of his political allies, in comparison to the pro-union views of Mr. Tomkins' former employer, amounted to coercion. The suit states that "Mayor Nutter, Commissioner (Philadelphia School District) Pedro Rivera and Mr. Tomkins knew that Mr. Tomkins had been involved in the 'horrific' practices

The Special Criminal Court judge overseeing the Murphy v State case, Mr Justice McCartan, ordered the establishment of a public inquiry into child abuse cover-ups at the Royal and Rotund Hospitals at Dundalk last year. While he accepted that setting up an inquiry would be a "massive undertaking", he said it was "wider in scope" than existing investigations into child abuse by the mid-1980s. Mr Hogan said he would have no choice but to act in accordance with the court order unless a government minister instructed him to drop it. "If a minister tells me to halt it, I'm going to honour that," he said. He said he would prefer the final report to be "broad brush" which could then
