Graphic design programs Graphics designers use programs like Adobe InDesign, Illustrator, and Photoshop, and their work is sophisticated yet simple, and includes layouts and precision work, adhoc design, and branding. InDesign is the most popular and commonly used of these programs. It enables you to lay out pages and communicate your ideas and message to customers, and makes it easy to produce layouts and art for books, magazines, newspapers, and more. Illustrator and Photoshop are popular programs for image creation. Like Photoshop, Illustrator's features include creating vector images. _Vector graphics_ (that is, shapes that look like actual images, even when scaled larger than life) enable you to change aspects of the image's color or patterns, as well as add effects such as drop shadows and shine. Using Illustrator and other vector software, you can create much more intricate images than you can in Photoshop.

Why learn Photoshop? There are many reasons why you should know Photoshop but a few of the major reasons are below. 1. It is widely used There are more than 15 million web designers who have been using Photoshop for more than 2 years. This adds up to hundreds of millions of images created daily and saved. If the overall number of people who use Photoshop to save images is 1 million, then every second someone uses Photoshop to save more than 3 images. This adds up to several hundred thousand images saved every day.

There are billions of images stored in Google Drive, or shared on social media. This number will increase as more people use Photoshop to create images. 2. It is widely used in advertising and marketing Adobe Photoshop is used in many large ad campaigns and often brands create images specifically for ad campaigns. These designs are often built using Photoshop Elements. Adobe uses Adobe Photoshop in almost every single print ad campaign they run. They often create digital art for print ads, or use their own art to run a campaign. This graphic ad for Old Navy was made using Photoshop. It was created by e-commerce agency Far West

Group. 3. An easy way to earn money Adobe Photoshop elements is an easy way to earn money. You do not have to be a graphic designer, you can buy Photoshop, or use a more expensive alternative like Photoshop professional. Many graphic artists start with Photoshop elements. For under $100, you can get a decent computer with Adobe Photoshop

Elements software on it. 4. It is easy to learn Learning Photoshop is one of the easiest ways to earn money. It is also one of the cheapest ways to get new clients. There are few requirements to learn Photoshop. You just need to learn the basics of using the software. An online or a tutorial course is enough to learn the basics. Since Adobe Photoshop is one of the most used software on the web, you can get help from those who already know Photoshop from other creative jobs like graphic artists or web designers. 5. Open source One of the best things about using Photoshop is the open source nature of it. If you already know how to use Photoshop, you can contribute and help make it better. If you do not know how to use Photoshop, you can ask other graphic artists how to do certain tasks. You will not only get help, you will learn how

Q: change color of text in id field-change onclick I have a list of tasks with some task IDs, onclick I want the list to change color on the selected task and its ID. I have this code: HTML JS function colorOne(id) { document.getElementById('myid').style.color ='red'; return false; } function colorTwo(id) { document.getElementById('myid').style.color = 'green'; return false; } function colorThree(id) { document.getElementById('myid').style.color = 'blue'; return false; } So the problem is that colorOne only changes the color of the LI and not the id field. I tried to use document.getElementById(this.id).style.color ='red' but this is completely different. So how can I change the color of the text in the id field with onclick A: Just change the color of the element using css function colorOne(id) { document.getElementById('myid').style.color ='red'; } function colorTwo(id) { document.getElementById('myid').style.color = 'green'; } function colorThree(id) { document.getElementById('myid').style.color = 'blue'; } powerless The occupant of the bully pulpit, the White House, has become a punch-drunk bully. Apparently, Pres. Obama is losing his touch, or maybe he just can't tell the difference between the old politics of the bully, and the new Twitter, or more accurately, Facebook, politics. Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg has resigned because of illness. I don't think we need to be political about it, other than a grateful President Obama should appoint one of her liberal political associates to fill the seat. I don't think it has anything to do with bias. I think it has something to do with the White House practicing less than perfect fiscal discipline and finding it difficult to resist playing politics. Ginsburg's travel budget has ballooned to $2 million a year. Her highfalutin travel entourage includes three Mercedes Benz limousines, or five luxury SUVs, not including the bus service. That is $9,000 a day for her bus service for just one person. But it's a badge of honor! It says you've arrived! We don't need a string of expensive limos for the White House, especially since the President won't even use them. He drives his own gas-guzzling Chevy Tahoe. He calls the Secret Service, and they bring him around in it. The limo is what the White House donors get. This is wrong. Another problem: The White House may be poor and getting poorer
