As 2015 ends and 2016 begins, I have had a different, but very intentional thought to live with more patience, kindness, and self-discipline. However, I've gotten more than I bargained for because of it. This year I am happier and I have accomplished so much, but there is one big thing I don't want to focus on: myself. The reason is because I think I am too self-centered and I'm too self-absorbed. I know I need to live a life of more contentment. I know I should try to be more understanding and to be kinder, but it's just too hard. It's just too hard to hold back from dwelling on my feelings and worrying over things I can't control. This only shows my lack of self-control. I'm ashamed to say it, but when I feel myself falling off my pedestal, I start to get scared. This pattern of falling has started to rear its ugly head the past couple of weeks. It's like I lose my stability in a way that I've never had. This causes me to feel insecure and to question things that I know in my heart that I really am. This is scary. It's a dangerous and debilitating aspect of the human personality. I'm not sure where it comes from because I'm never like this, and my empathy is impeccable. I know I'm very sensitive to other people and I'm very observant. This whole scenario came out of nowhere. I have no explanation, or outside influence that could relate to this. I know, "it must be me." I want to find a way to break this pattern, but I feel powerless. That doesn't come easy to me. It's like my brain isn't working properly. I can't concentrate or focus. I'm an emotional person and I'm always looking for people to connect with, but this is not the way to do it. I need to be myself and just be in my emotional space, and not be so sensitive to others emotions. I have so much to learn about myself and to explore. I need to get out of my own way and stop running from all the things I need to get to. I think that I can do it if I work at it. I'm not sure how, but I know I can. I need to keep my eyes focused on my goals and pursuits. I need to try to stay in
