Based on true Newtonian Physics, n-body VR immerses you in a deep space, 4D playground of sight and sound with your HTC Vive. You arrive in deep space enveloped by the Milky Way Galaxy. Next you'll spawn and direct planetoids of different size, speed and direction. Fly along as gravity takes hold and moves your creation into orbit. This unique new experience promises to be fun and interesting to generations of space-time enthusiasts. Key Features HTC Vive Virtual Space Experience Based upon Newtons Laws of Gravity and Motion Colliding planetoids combine mass and alter gravitational forces Planetoids can be created, captured and tossed Fly along "jet pack" style with a controlled thruster Nobody simulates gravity better than n-body!!! Available for Oculus Rift, HTC Vive, Windows PC (Playstation VR), & XboxOne! Addictive VR game combines puzzles, VR, and music. Reviews This is the best VR football game so far. Recommended PhilanthroPwn (via YouTube) This is the best VR football game so far. Recommended Bumble (via YouTube) Do we finally have a good American Football game in VR? YES WE DO! Recommended VR Game Rankings Every level has a unique layout of cubes and spheres with different kinds of colors. All cubes get attracted to the ball you are controlling. You have to avoid the colored ones (red, blue, etc) and collect the white ones. After clearing a level the total of cubes gets counted and the collected cubes can be spent to give your ball a different look. The game contains a couple of achievements, cloud save and gamepad controls are supported. The game is not hard but more in between easy and normal. It's meant to relax instead of being too challenging. The background music will reflect the easy-going vibe of the game. What's new:

Neighbor said many times about the house, “That woman took a giant stride last year with that fence. Almost makes you think she might turn hunter.” It’s true. The fence goes three and a half miles around her place. You can’t see a thing but her house from the one at the edge of the trees. I had to give up gardening to stop feeling sorry for her. but lately I’ve been dreaming of warm weather and long days of picnic and storytelling I think it’s the warm days from the beginning of winter. The sunlight like a golden show starting against the charcoal sky. Well, it’s not as simple as that, but still, there’s no doubt that it’s that kind of day that stirs in me the longing to hunker down beside a fire on the hearth and wait for fall to come back. Already the days are getting short. Soon I’ll be covered head to foot. I’m picturing the town for a movie in my head. The focal center would be around my house, and facing out from it would be the Main Street Parade, a snaking procession of decorated cars and people all down the center of the town. As in the mountains, each town claims its own “Main St.” And I can hear the woodwind ensemble blaring like the pixie angels who sing on Main st in the original postcard image. It would be one of those days where the happy and the sad are on parade together. There would be a band of small children dressed in white with their white poofy dresses, along with their chaperones, the mothers in shiny furs and headbands under their hats. Each child’s mother would be busy whipping cream or butter, as the case may be, while their coaches sit beside them with M-Bag or sweets. There would be a wagon of herring and pickles for the fathers.
