Instead, the user should simply click a button, and the application must generate a DTMF tone from the user's voice. The user should be able to repeat the same key tone with the same voice (i.e. It would not be necessary to read the text on the keypad). In my opinion, this is something that can be done using the Android OS for phones, but how do I go about doing it, and what do I need to learn? I know how to play a sound file, but not how to generate a DTMF tone. A: I've looked into this before. There are several different ways to achieve what you are asking for. The best method that I found was one that would require the least amount of programming. What I did was record the user's voice. This is not a hard task if you have a mobile phone with a decent mic. you can find the android documentation on it here: You can also find open source projects on github that can help you generate an audio file that contains DTMF tones.

Q: USB device ID's in linux I have a laptop with a USB webcam. In the Linux device list, it has the following IDs: Bus 001 Device 006: ID 0d8c:0402 C-Media Electronics, Inc. Bus 001 Device 002: ID 0bda:0847 Realtek Semiconductor Corp. RTS5227 PCI Express Card Reader I got the webcam working without installing anything. It, however, does not seem to load photos from the camera - even after replacing the card (so that we know that the camera is OK and with a driver). On my new machine, which is a desktop with Ubuntu, it also has a webcam which is also detected and used by default. Where can I look for that USB ID in order to find out the difference between it and the one in my laptop? Edit: Some more information. I have no specific questions yet, since I'm at a loss after doing some research, trying stuff out and reading and comparing documentation. A: Most likely an HP multifunction device, which is to say that there is a device with a webcam on one end, which is intended to be used with a printer with this other end. As such, the details under /proc/bus/usb/devices for that device depend on where the extension cable is. A quick search through USB Mfg ID search engine shows that 0d8c:0402 is MSC F

The world of the game has always been large, so I've played a lot of game of that kind. During a short break, I'm trying to launch a game that is very different, but I also have many similar elements. As this is an independent title, players from the whole world are having a chance to play it. There's so much good advice, thanks for giving me advice as a game that does not fit my image of a game. Q: Is it correct to say that a Schengen country has to be a signatory of the Schengen Convention? For example, I don't think Luxembourg can be a Schengen country unless it is a signatory of the Schengen Convention? A: No. The Schengen Treaty is not a multilateral treaty. It is an intergovernmental agreement. In fact it is the result of a bilateral treaty between Belgium, the then-Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, West Germany, the Netherlands, Portugal, and the United Kingdom. Unlike the European Union treaties, the Schengen Treaty is not ratified by the legislature of each of the participating countries, but rather by the member states of the Council of Europe (the European Union's predecessor). So to say that a country "signs" the treaty is not correct. There are two sources for the signatories to the Treaty: It was signed by the governments of Belgium, France, West Germany, The Netherlands, Portugal, and the United Kingdom (as the "European Community") on 25 May 1985, and came into force on 25 May 1990. A: As for the Schengen area, the first article of the treaty says: An Action and Decision of the Council of Ministers adopted by unanimous vote on 1 December 1985, has come into effect as of the day and year above mentioned. And (emphasis mine): The Treaty shall enter into force on the first of the following months: for Belgium, for Denmark, the Netherlands, Portugal, and the United Kingdom, on the first day of the fifth month of the month in which the Treaties of accession are brought into force, for France, on the first of the month in which the Treaties of accession are finally brought into force. So, it only says what the application date for Schengen is for the signatories. And Luxembourg is not one of those signatories. The Schengen agreement was signed and entered into force on 1 December 1985, with article 25 stating that the member states could join in 1991. This was after Luxembourg had it's independence

Role of ACTH-induced PRL release in the rat. The role of anterior pituitary proopiomelanocortin (POMC)-derived peptides in the release of pituitary prolactin during ACTH treatment of intact adult male rats was investigated. ACTH increased plasma prolactin levels severalfold in the control animals. Pretreatment with the ACTH-receptor antagonist RU 38486 (0.2 mg/kg) completely abolished this rise. In contrast, the early proopiomelanocortin (POMC)-derived peptide alpha-MSH, which potentiates the secretion of ACTH, administered alone (2.5 micrograms) or together with ACTH (10 ng) increased plasma prolactin levels. The 1-24-ACTH (2.5 ng), whose secretion is increased by adrenalectomy, also potentiated the rise in plasma prolactin levels during ACTH treatment. In contrast, the 1-12 ACTH, which stimulates POMC peptide release but fails to stimulate the release of ACTH, had no effect on basal or ACTH-stimulated plasma prolactin levels. The results suggest that (1) ACTH induces and releases prolactin by an ACTH receptor-mediated mechanism; (2) the peptide found in the ACTH 1-24 region, termed alpha-MSH, can potentiate the release of prolactin; (3) the effects of ACTH and alpha-MSH are mediated by separate mechanisms.
