Book Reggae Bloodlines: In Search Of The Music And Culture Of JamaicaFine-needle aspiration cytology in the diagnosis of small pulmonary nodules: usefulness of cell block preparations and a flow cytometric profile. To evaluate the usefulness of fine-needle aspiration cytology (FNAC) in diagnosing small pulmonary nodules and to obtain cell block preparations and flow cytometry profiles on the same specimens, we retrospectively reviewed the results of 2,750 fine-needle aspiration (FNA) procedures in the last 3 years. The FNA materials were adequate in 100% of the cases, with no false-positive or false-negative results; 90% (2,244 of 2,688 nodules) were confirmed surgically; positive predictive value was 100% (1,261 of 1,261 nodules); sensitivity was 99.9% (2,222 of 2,221 nodules); specificity was 96.2% (54 of 56 nodules). Among the 96 malignant lesions diagnosed by FNA, 93% had an initially benign cytological result (45% adequate). Of the 93 adenocarcinomas, 19 (20%) showed atypical atypical cells and 61 (65%) showed atypical carcinomas. In 25% (25/96) of the malignant nodules, an extended follow-up was obtained by serial FNAs, which remained negative. For diagnosing pulmonary adenocarcinoma, FNA has a sensitivity of 95%, a specificity of 98%, and a positive predictive value of 98%. Cell block preparations and flow cytometric profiles were performed on 93 cases, showing only one case with a false-negative result. These results demonstrate the usefulness of cell block preparations and a flow cytometric profile obtained from a single FNA specimen in the diagnosis of small pulmonary nodules. The examination of the preparations used in conjunction with the FNA has decreased the rate of negative results, and the flow cytometric profile provides useful prognostic information.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to the field of separation of organic materials. More specifically, the invention comprises a device and method for separating the components of a solution.
2. Description of the Related Art There are times when a large quantity of a specific organic material must be separated from a greater mass of a different organic material. For example, in the case of a crude oil production facility, the production water can be concentrated and separated into oil and water components, and the 0cc13bf012
