The news was announced last week during a presentation at the Television Critics Association Awards. The hope is that some of the drama series could be sold for adaptation to international broadcasters who would subsequently fund British/foreign co-production. "BBC Flim Flam Films are making a great start on our first season but we're planning to have a steady flow of content over the next two years," director and producer Moray McLaren stated. As well as four first-look drama projects, a documentary series is also in development which is expected to focus on the BBC's History series. Paul Toomer who is developing the drama series will work closely with Flim Flam Films, the BBC production house. Working with the commissioning editorial staff, he will be designing a number of pilot scripts over the coming months which will hopefully be tested out during a series of workshops with industry professionals in August 2014. The aim of the workshops is to determine what is going to be the best way to achieve Flim e79caf774b
