The N-methyl-D-aspartate receptor (NMDAR) subunits are a group of proteins that are part of the cell surface receptor for glutamate. Five different genes encode for NMDAR subunits: GRIN1, GRIN2A, GRIN2B, GRIN2C, and GRIN3A. Mutations in NMDAR subunits have been identified as a cause of diverse forms of intellectual disability (ID). Here, we applied nanopore sequencing to analyze a cohort of 40 individuals with ID to detect disease-causing variants and to analyze the influence of genotype on phenotype. In a prospective cohort of 13 individuals with intellectual disability and normal karyotype, we identified a known pathogenic mutation in the GRIN1 gene in nine of these individuals (the S522X allele, seven affected individuals, and the c.2078G > A transition, one affected individual). In this cohort, we report five novel variants in GRIN2A and GRIN2B genes (and two novel variants in the GRIN3A gene). The GRIN2A:p.Gly937Asp, GRIN2B:p.Gly2761Asp, and GRIN3A:c.1327C > G variants were identified in a patient with ID, autism, and epilepsy. The GRIN2B:p.Gly1054Glu and GRIN3A:p.Gly1221Asp variants were identified in a cohort of four individuals with ID, without epilepsy. Sanger sequencing confirmed all variants except the GRIN1:p.Ser522X allele. In addition, we performed a gene-based analysis on all cases and controls to evaluate the value of targeted NMDAR genes. Two rare variants, GRIN1:c.2078G > A and GRIN3A:p.Arg2171Gly, which were found to be enriched in the ID cohort and found only once in four controls, were identified in the GRIN1 and GR
