Pathfinder 2's game system has its roots in three early AD&D games: the Expert Gamers Guide (EGG), Classic AD&D, and Fourth Edition. But its playability was strengthened by years of experience with the ever-evolving online game that is Pathfinder, a roleplaying-game version of the Pathfinder RPG rule-set. The game of Pathfinder 2 is designed to let you enjoy the core rules in more depth, without worrying about memorizing dozens of new rules. It offers faster play, fewer pages of rules, more story, more player interaction, and more communication with your players. Pathfinder 2 provides options for character generation, from a single, non-drow character to a fully-drow character ready for granddaddy roleplaying. As an option, a list of Encounter XP can be added to the game, providing more opportunities for adventuring, as well as more combat encounter variation. Pathfinder 2 also gives you the option to create a game where everyone plays their own character, or everyone plays a character together. In either case, everyone still takes their notes from their character sheet, but will choose from a list of free-form notes and memory aids that fit their character. Pathfinder 2 can create and manage dozens of campaigns, characters, NPCs, monsters, and player notes. It works as a single-document campaign framework, letting you build, and manage, a rich campaign from start to finish. The advantages of Pathfinder 2 over Pathfinder become more obvious as the game progresses, as it is easier to build your own campaigns, characters, and monsters, while your players gain experience and grow. Pathfinder 2 - The Basics Pathfinder 2 is a very solid, easy-to-learn, easy-to-play, and affordable game system. It is an open-ended system, allowing you to play a character for as long as you want to. You can start a character from scratch, with full racial characteristics, or build a character that reflects your own experience and outlook on the world. You can even give your character an accent. Pathfinder 2 is a quick-play roleplaying game, with a simple combat system that allows players to quickly resolve clashes. With just a few symbols, characters can fight at medium range with no disadvantages or penalties, and attacks with advantage. A few turns later, the loser is rolled over, and a new enemy appears. The game uses a simple, easy-to-understand, non-threatening system

Q: Weekly topic challenge #82 Now we're into the week beginning November 22, the weekly topic challenge is now active. What is a topic challenge? See the blog post here for more information about topic challenges. Here's the call for proposals. Make your proposal by answering this question. Once the challenge is over, we'll tally the results and winners will be announced in the next weekly post. Good luck! A: I've done a browser extension for Firefox and Chrome, which I call ".net" (as it focuses on "net" related posts). Inspired by the mind meme (which got popular here recently), I would like to see more domain names posted up here. (Challenge #82 ██████████💎 before upregulation of Nrf2 and activation of the glutathione (GSH) system ([@B67]). Oxidative stress is observed in the liver of obese mice. We have found that GSH levels are decreased in the liver of HFD-fed mice (data not shown). Together, our results suggest that diets containing GSH- and ATRA-rich compounds may be useful for the prevention of liver damage, including NAFLD and NASH.

Conclusion {#S5} ===== Our study demonstrated that HFD induced NASH in mice, accompanied by altered hepatic functions and inflammation. However, GSH- and ATRA-enriched diets significantly ameliorated the development of HFD-induced NASH. The results showed that GSH- and ATRA-enriched diets could enhance SOD and CAT activity, and promote GSH synthesis, thereby lowering hepatic lipid peroxidation and oxidation, which suggests that GSH- and ATRA-enriched diets could have beneficial effects on the treatment of NAFLD and NASH.

Author Contributions {#S6} ===== LM and JT contributed to the design of the study. LM, LW, and JT carried out the study. LM, YL, and QW analyzed the data. QW, YL, and JT contributed to the interpretation of the data. LM and YL contributed to the writing of the manuscript. All authors read and approved the final manuscript.

Conflict of Interest Statement {#S7} ===== The authors declare that the research was conducted in the absence of any commercial or financial relationships that could be construed as a potential conflict of interest.

What's new:

, Violence Against the Jailers Is at Record High by Peter Williams “I’ve been in 12 different jails, and I was shackled to a heat pipe on a hot day by a bunch of convicts,” said cofounder and CEO of a newly-rebranded prison management company, “I know where I am now. The best thing about a prison is that everything else gets taken away.” He laughed, adding that in his small Southern State Correctional Facility, “kids 15 and 16 years old...have been sentenced as young as 11,” which he says is “mentally damaging.” Isn’t this the way that it usually goes in Supermax-style prisons, where inmates cannot include a single close relative in their visitation tentatively scheduled for the future? Isn’t this the way that the U.S. government — as the proud, corporate occupier of Guantanamo Bay — treats its detainees of the nineteen-eleven mold? Ever since founding Prison Management Services (Slayde Conolava, Edinboro, PA, which had been under a protective order against violence since 2009 when some of its clients tried to strangle or kill some of their associates who were going to testify against them or represent them in court,) IMG has worked with institutions that have been struggling with violence-caused suicides. Also, IMG was the provider of prison guards — because protecting inmates from their captors was a big risk, IMG always was in the background, backstopping any of its clients who wanted to undertake a risky, unpopular action and somehow implicating them in a “case of their own”: “I’m the only one allowed in the yard,” [IMG owner] Slayde [Conolava] said as guards lined up and tightened the locks that enclosed the second building of the Widows [Pennsylvania State) Prison. “They are still letting in the kids now.” It would be the most dangerous time for the kids, because this beautiful day would also be the hottest one of the year so far. “I’ve been in 12 different jails, and I was shackled to a heat pipe on a hot day by a bunch of convicts,” he said. “I know where I am now. The best thing about a prison is that everything else gets taken away.
