DESCRIPTION: None if the VGA output is active, Fits.@ref22]\] However, Gallardo-Pascual et al\[[(\mathbb{q}\mathrm{Carganism})\footnote{1} \] found no correlation between anosognosia and clinical findings. Our study design has certain limitations, among which the cross-sectional design is the most significant. Thus, we are restricted to our data and only the information that we have can be reported. The second limitation of our study is its small sample size, which masses it difficult to generalize our findings. A third issue that limits our study is that, even though the assessment of the disease can be considered as good for the population of our country, there is a possibility of exaggeration in the patients' responses for the purpose of the study. Lastly, the fourth limitation of our study is related to the use of quantitative methods to determine anosognosia. Although we tried to minimize that limitation by making our interview the standard and quantitative methods in different categories
