It has been suggested that two DM1 gene mutations, an insertion of a 29 bp nucleotide sequence in intron 21 and a mutation at position 3 of the CTG repeat (CTG(3)) are restricted to African populations. To test this hypothesis, we investigated 5 unrelated Å patients with myotonic dystrophy type 1 (DM1) and linked the CTG repeat size in the first intron to the DM1 phenotype. Our data confirm that in Mauritius, there are two different mutations in the DM1 gene. The CTG(1) deletion mutation is restricted to African populations while the CTG(29) insertion mutation, recently identified in France, is not found in Mauritius. Pentacene intercalator-based metal organic frameworks for dye-sensitized solar cells
