MicroRNA-9 Promotes Embryonic Neural Cell Differentiation of Human Induced Pluripotent Stem Cells via the Wnt/ β -Catenin Signaling Pathway. Human induced pluripotent stem cells (iPSCs) are the precursors of all cells and play a pivotal role in nervous system diseases, traumatic brain injuries, Parkinson's disease, and Alzheimer's disease. During the current study, we engineered iPSCs to promote proliferation of embryonic brain-derived neural cells, specifically the differentiation of hESCs into neuroblasts. Twenty-one differentially expressed microRNAs (miRNAs) between iPSCs and hESCs were investigated. Among these miRNAs, miR-9 emerged as a key regulator in the differentiation process. Introducing miR-9 enhanced the neural differentiation, while inhibiting miR-9 retarded the induction process. Further, we found that miR-9 promoted neural differentiation via the Wnt/ β -catenin pathway. Knockdown and overexpression of each component of this pathway confirmed that miR-9 modulated the basic Wnt/ β -catenin pathway. In addition, a luciferase reporter assay revealed that miR-9 regulated the expression of Axin2 at the post-transcriptional level. Therefore, miR-9 is an independent regulator and potent mediator of neural cell differentiation. The identification of miR-9 as such an upstream regulator of neural cell differentiation sheds light on its clinical application, including for nervous system diseases.
