Each item in the list has two checkboxes and a link. If the user clicks on the link, the master list has a clickEvent handler setup on it. Once the clickEvent handler is triggered, it needs to return a value to the form (this.checked). Anyone done this before? It may be that it just can't be done or that I need to use a different approach to accomplish this task. A: In your handler you could use the |event| parameter to pass any information to the handler and then use this to reference the Form Forms.myForm.addEventListener("click", function(event, columnData) { // use columnData here to reference things on the form });

Photograph: AFP As Theresa May flies to Brussels for a fractious European summit, she knows that she has a weak hand. The most recent European Commission forecasts show that Britain is still set to lose £40 billion from the UK's gross national income every year, making the government an unreliable partner. The prime minister has also made it clear that she won't accept a deal on Brexit that would leave Northern Ireland tied to EU rules and regulations while the rest of the UK is free to diverge, as former first minister Arlene Foster has called for in her own ambition for what the border is dubbed a "new economic zone". But May still hopes for a breakthrough in Brussels that will allow her to proclaim the deal as her own. The Observer has learned that senior Conservative ministers believe that the draft text that the party and the Democratic Unionist party's Brexit negotiators are putting together for Mrs May would be unpopular in Northern Ireland. Critics believe that the DUP has been too accommodating to the European Union, and hope that the prime minister will be able to bring down her government in the next couple of weeks.
