If you need to organize your data in a way that makes sense to you, FileSieve is the tool to use. Its simple methods make it easy to decide which files to delete, move, modify, or archive. Key Features: Create profiles with custom methods Fully customizable directory structures Copy or move files Perform simulated operations Move, duplicate, and delete files Copy directories Override, modify, and consolidate file name attributes Support for over 50 file attributes including date/time, size, and type Compatible with .NET Framework 2.0 and above Requirements: Windows 98/NT/2000/XP .NET Framework 2.0Q: Block user's account automatically after x amount of failed login attempts. Programatically using .NET or ASP.NET I have a student database which contains the student ID and an encrypted password. I know the student ID and a student name. The student ID is unique, but two students could share the same name. The database will be used to authenticate the student, and only the student will have access to the website. Users will create accounts, enter a password, which I'll validate using the student ID and a new encrypted password I generate at random every time they try to log in. The user will re-enter their password on the next login. The problem is: Once a user has failed to log in x amount of times, I need to automatically block their account. We don't know beforehand how many times this will occur, but they must be able to log in before they can be blocked. I'm looking for two options: Option 1: The automated blocked user account function already exists in ASP.NET / C#. I'd like to use this block a user after x number of failed login attempts. Option 2: I have the possibility of implementing this myself. Creating an external "blacklist" file of banned IPs, email addresses, etc. I need to implement the second option, so I'd like your input as to which code I should create for this purpose. Any help would be great! Thank you! A: According to @Your_Dog you want to use a table that keeps track of failed login attempts. An example table for that might look like this: `CREATE TABLE failed_login_attempts ( id b7e8fdf5c8`
