I bet you are missing the "true" SuperCollider images. Not just the org.scsupercollider.shikigami.preview.scpreview.jpg that comes with SSC, but the full package as well. You can find the file I'm referring to for SuperCollider 2.09 here in case you need it. A: It appears that the file scpreview.jpg contains a file with a different MIME type (image/png) than what the SSC webpage claims (image/jpeg). I have no idea what you are using it for (or how) but from a quick test the same image is also present in the org.scsupercollider.shikigami package. Note that you have to extract it (as a zip) and open it in a text editor before you can check for the file (unzip org.scsupercollider.shikigami.zip in a text editor and search the whole folder for scpreview.jpg). Does it work? A: found a solution at replace image with scpreview.jpg by possible problems with the jpg Q: How does the Windows name server work How does the Windows name server work? Does it get all the filenames from the client in a defined protocol and then compare them to the namespace registered on it? How come you can have two DNS root servers? What is the DNS root server anyway? Why can't a DNS root server provide forwards (reverse DNS)? A: No, there's no defined protocol, the name server only gets the hostname, and finds it in the mappings (on LDAP, Active Directory, DNS, etc.). As far as I'm aware, DNS roots don't have any special functions. For example, a DNS root could just be a machine that forwards queries to its parent DNS servers. I have been a

Free new paypal account. which is not an instantaneous process. :). I just read this: [ your-guide-to-universal-ex...]( your-guide-to-universal-exchanges.html) -- Postfix won't let me send to anyone on the internet, but will let me send to my own computer. I'm using examplemail.com (CNAME record to my IP). What I want to be able to do is send from examplemail.com to examplemail.com for myself. But Postfix is refusing to send to the web (I'm using a web site as an email provider). . Ahem.. To anyone who can help me out: thank you very much. Postfix has many services running on it -- SpamAssasin, Sendmail, Procmail, ClamAV, it does logging, it does mail filtering (SpamAssassin 2, ClamAV, etc), it does spam filtering (SpamAssassin,

Where does Postfix get its configuration information? Mailman? apparently Postfix reads its configuration info from Maildir and database files, actually in the end the config is read from /etc/postfix/main.cf and /etc/postfix/postfix.cf anyway, you can have a look at the master.cf contents in your /etc/postfix folder, this is the place that every process related to your SMTP will be checked if you have something ok there.
