Immerse yourself in a tightly-crafted, modern fantasy world, in which you carve your path towards your destiny. Fated is a coming of age story of a boy born in the not-too-distant future. After an accident leaves him stranded in a cavern far from civilization, he is raised by ravenous beasts who fail to understand his unique, human way of thinking. He is a boy, alone, and still holding within him a spark of magic that could give birth to a new age. Pursue your own unique path through the world, according to your own values, develop your own unique tactics, and discover the deeper meaning behind the events that unfold before your eyes. Fated is playable from all viewpoints, no matter what character you choose, and it is filled with entirely unique, carefully designed content. It is a unique world designed specifically for tablets, in which you can choose a specific path to what you want from life, learn through experience, and grow stronger by making the right choices. Based on the 'interview' at the end of the demo. (in Japanese) The single most important thing I've done, which I am extremely happy about, is I've done an overhaul on Fated's UI/UX/Design/Animation, and everything in-between. It is looking and feeling like a new game. As I've mentioned before, Fated is a game I've thought about making since I was just a kid. Over these past couple years, the experience at a company like Maiden Japan has given me the opportunity to bring my long-time dream to life. I feel a little bad putting it into words, but the fact that I am telling you all this, shows that I am really going all out in bringing this game to life. It's been my biggest passion for as long as I can remember. About the English localization: I am working with ELVEN on the localization. I chose ELVEN because it has the combination of being familiar with Japanese language, and being familiar with English language. (There was a reason for this.) Using this experience, it would be great to just completely ignore the language barrier and go directly to the English content. I am not saying that we are going to be changing all the text, I am saying that the language isn't going to be

In an old forgotten hotel that remained untouched until now, a team of 7 individuals is going to start working in the new season. They will have to work without any supervision so that they can accomplish their goal. The game is about them working with each other in order to make something out of nothing in the hostel. Game Features: - 7 different characters to work with - 2 different endings for each one of the characters. The guest stay in the hostel, and you get to decide how they will be treated. - Players will have their own goal, as well as the game's goals. - Unlike some games, the game will not ask the player what ending to choose during the storyline. Build and I've been working on a new RPG called Hotel Anatolia. If everything goes to plan, it will be released in December for both PC and mobile. This is a project I've been working on for nearly 10 months now, and this time I didn't just cut the project by a few hundred hours and call it a day. It has been one the most rewarding and fun projects I've ever worked on, and I am proud to present you guys with my first ever blog post. The background story is simple, in a forgotten hotel where nothing has been done since a 100 years ago. The main story will take place in the first month of that. And since this was my first project I wanted to do a lot of things myself and without any guidance. I had a lot of trouble maintaining the direction of the story and the game, but somehow it all worked out, and there will be a grand conclusion in the end. I hope that you guys will enjoy it! Some of the game's features are still being polished, but I am confident that the final game will be better than The Raven, and hopefully better than any game I've released before. And I've worked very hard to make sure that I will be able to deliver all of this in less than a year. In the next month there will be a lot of stuff coming in the way of new characters, new rooms, new experience points, new quests, and most importantly new looks. I hope to make it a bit easier to follow along with the development of the game. Here is a little video of the game's first map. You can also check out the game's graphics in this portfolio.
