Recent studies indicate that endotoxin is a potent precipitant of asthma in susceptible persons. At high concentrations (100 ng), endotoxin stimulates an inflammatory response which leads to constriction of small airways (alveolar ducts). At lower concentrations (10 ng), endotoxin stimulates bronchoconstriction, which is probably mediated through the release of arachidonic acid metabolites from blood platelets. This review summarizes current research in this area and places it in the context of a series of controlled and uncontrolled studies that lead to the conclusion that endotoxin may play a major role in the exacerbation of asthma in susceptible patients.Q: std::vector's Insert(): Can't assign to operator[] I am trying to insert an element into a std::vector using the operator [] but I keep getting the error "warning: assignment of
