I really love the interface, i have converted several dialogs from rc4 to the latest version very easily... There are some small bugs here and there, but overall it is very nice tool. Help you make the most of the modern look of Windows and Office, and adapt your applications to the look and feel of your windows environment. Easily add news and other similar dialogs to your application and keep the look consistent with the rest of your application. Developers who do not want to modify the default look of the windows and the progressbar can easily generate them using the provided template. Rely on powerful, built-in components, and you're less likely to need third party components. 1. Is there a limit to the number of components in the IDE? Does the IDE support multiple themes? Multiple themes mean that you can have more than one dialog and keep them consistent. The number of components you can add is not limit by the IDE, although at the moment there is only one dialog template. You can create the dialogs from multiple dialog templates and they can be inserted in the same GUI. You can use WX Designer for creating the GUI, it has a built-in dialog template for the main windows and frames. You just need to drag the components to their positions from the palette, and they will be grouped in the same dialog. You can also create custom components and templates for them. If you want to create dialogs from other sources, you just need to use the same component palette and drag the component or template into the dialog. 2. How can I keep more than one dialog in my project? Does the IDE support multiple themes? Currently the IDE only supports one dialog at the time. To keep more dialogs in your project you need to export each of them to a WXD file, and then you can load them into the IDE.
