WoltLab has created the WoltLab Burning Board, a diskless firewall and router with preconfigured 802.11b/g wireless networking for homes and small offices. Available in both CD and retail DVD/media player versions, the WoltLab Burning Board includes updated firmware, preconfigured DHCP/PXE boot settings, and WOL support. The media player version of the WoltLab Burning Board supports audio CDs and DVD's. A dual-use low cost wireless gateway for a home or small office networking solution, the WoltLab Burning Board allows for wireless, wireline, or router redundancy. Using PXE netboot to pull a Debian Linux installation from a 200MB burned image file, a secured IP address is assigned to the unit and the wireless network configuration is preconfigured. The firmware upgrade is accomplished by a USB pen drive. How to find the serial number of a video card? Los Angeles County Superior Court records show the woman's attorney filed the lawsuit in August against Sean Nienaber, 20, and his two sisters, Christine and Andrea Nienaber, 19 and 18, and John Davis, 18, as well as the city of Hayward. The case is outlined in the lawsuit and it was not immediately clear if the defendants ever were served. The case was filed under the name of the victim, who's from Long Beach. It is not known whether Christine and Andrea Nienaber and Davis are related. Get Breaking News Delivered to Your Inbox The suit claims they "all conspired to beat, batter, threaten and attack" the victim. The victim claims she was "unconscious and in extreme pain" as she walked to her car on Aug. 28, 2015, at about 4 a.m. near Pinewood and Haskell streets. She told police she was "hit in the head with a beer bottle," her hair was pulled and she was kicked in the head. Court documents filed by her attorney say the victim was missing a breast and had multiple fractured ribs, bruising and abrasions on the left side of her face and head. The victim was treated at Kaiser Permanente
