Immersive stories are told through photos. What you see, you experience. On livejournal About Me I'm an independent Japanese game developer with a degree in Game Design. In this site I try to introduce the games I develop, and I'll post reviews on various aspects of video game. In the course of building games and posting them here, I've been amazed to find many people who share the same interests, and eventually we reached this point. And now, I'll share about our communication of the Japan-made video games to the rest of the world. China launched its first own deep-sea port yesterday in what may be a move toward greater access to resources and trade in the South China Sea. The port in deep-sea water southeast of Guangzhou is China's first deep-sea port, with two jetties and a total area of about 11 hectares. The port can receive ships measuring up to 200 meters in length and is jointly built with a port operator in Guangdong province, the Eastern Star Shipping Corporation. The landing of the Deep Sea Pearl, a cruise ship, was launched, according to the Eastern Star Shipping Corporation. It is also the China's first "new generation" deep-sea container port, which is five times larger than existing ports, and significantly more efficient. The 300-meter-long port has a draft of nearly 15 meters and a total capacity of 1.5 million deadweight tons - enough to handle about one million containers - and has land, water and sky contours that match the surrounding sea. The port is equipped with the latest technology in telecommunications, internet, information technology and navigation systems to improve port management and coordination. Deep-sea ports are widely used in the United States and Germany but are rare in China. The design of the port also makes it possible to mix cargo and passengers easily and easy to tackle ocean traffic problems. "We are not just using deep-sea ports, but the ports in the process of construction also provide floating docks and other navigation aids for deep-sea ships," Wang Zhongxin, president of Eastern Star Shipping, told Xinhua. The Guangdong port is expected to be completed by the end of 2009 and to handle container ships up to 120,000 deadweight tons. China is interested in ports that can handle a published:16 Jan 2016 views:5061 Newman Newman is a living sculpture. It is a robotic "humanoid" being with a mechanical "body" and a fully functioning brain with an internal clock. Her brain is wired directly into her nervous system and controls her metabolic processes. While not "intelligent" in the traditional sense, her brain is wired in such a way as to make her an emotion-driven, thinking, feeling and reasoning being. Her biological carbon structures are replaced with a mechanical form of plastic and metal, fortified with cybernetics. This gives her a balance of both physical and mental strength, durability and agility. Her life is a series of experiences that change her and strengthen her, forever. Newman fulfills her existence, enduring the dangers and extraordinary situations she faces for one reason. She wants to be loved. The Human Spark The human spark is a term used to refer to the idea of a person's consciousness being their being human, and each person has their own unique identity and most likely their own unique spark (their consciousness or soul). Numerous humanist philosophers, mainly of the 20th century, such as Peter Singer, Derek Parfit, John Gray, and Michael Sandel, have believed in the importance of individual consciousness, but by then, they made a conscious decision to think that the individual is the central thing in humanity. What's new:

Sharon Salyer (mercury may be up above the clouds) was not a rocket scientist at the time she met her husband, David Salyer. But she brought her math skills to the marriage. The Virginia native brought home hundreds of nail polish bottles, but wouldn't let her four year-old daughter wear the colors. "So, I carefully cut all the labels off and filled empty bottles with my own nail polishes," she says. "I had no idea how to colour these, so I just painted her nails with my samples—like a total nut." Strawberries, bunnies, and walnuts. If you didn't want to be arrested by the Secret Police, the front-page police of the time, you had to act normal. "Our daughter's first set of 'bunny' shoes were worn daily—for years," says Salyer. "In the 80s, she'd be in her pajamas in the morning, then put on bunny slippers and let's just say the neighbors noticed." But one day, David Salyer returned from work and noted that two of his daughter's shoes had been painted. Impatiently, he searched through the nail polish bottles. "And then, I heard an almighty squeal of pure delight," says Salyer. "So much joy," she says. "And it got me to thinking. What if we could paint the boring old night out rocket space craft with fun colors like pink and purple? We were talking to space cadets soon after, and they noticed the labels on the packaging had plenty of space for nail polish—and they loved the idea." "So, on our 18th anniversary, and after 20,000 stickers, they designed Space to Venture." Created at Festimap, an independent graphic design company in Baltimore, Md., the 1½-inch stickers became well-loved. And during an appearance on 500 creative forces last year, Harvard University Professor Robert Mesher, said the stickers inspired a student named Tyler Beck to create an app called Tokens of Creativity. He still markets them today. "It's a fun way for parents to express their creativity to their kids—even sound required, works with the default RTP *Royalty-free music *Easy to integrate and customize To use Gyrowolf in your RTP, simply add the "rpg:gyrowolf" music group to your music player and edit it to fit your game's time of day. NOT INCLUDED: You can download the entire soundtrack as part of this package. Don't have time to assemble? Just download the "rpg:gyrowolf" music group separately in a zip-file. If this is the first time you're using Gyrowolf, you can also browse and download the songs individually. Gyrowolf © 2017 Language: EnglishQ: T-SQL : Select all rows between two time stamps, only if the time stamp occurs more than once I'm just looking for the most efficient way to query the rows of a table between two times: the start and the end time. The catch is this: if two time stamps are recorded in the same row in the table, I only want to include the first of those two rows. For example: | id | time_stamp | 1 2016-10-16 00:15:00 2 2016-10-16 00:15:00 3 2016-10-16 00:45:00 4 2016-10-16 01:01:00 5 2016-10-16 02:45:00 6 2016-10-16 03:45:00 Then the rows in this example should be included: | id | time_stamp | 1 2016-10-16 00:15:00 3 2016-10-16 00:45:00 This gets more complicated if you have say 10 minutes in a row: | id | time_stamp | 1 2016-10-16 00:00:00 2

A: What you're looking for are the'settings' (read 'basic' settings) that you can modify in the 'info' area (which generally isn't visible on download pages). There are two specific things to change for your download: 'Allow installations on different computers' : I don't know how the game downloads the files so it would be hard to tell, but it wouldn't be the first time that working with an executable file had to do with permissions. Try doing a file 'Chmod' on the application, see if that makes a difference. 'Maximum allowed files' : If this is allowing too many files to get downloaded at a time or something, try changing this to be more restrictive. This is the application's 'download
