Now you can explore all our covers, and read full articles from classic issues dating back to our 1967 launch in our brand-new Cover Wall. Explore the Coverwall » Five Irish bands who would never be played on the radio If you've been watching the last couple years, you've probably seen a lot of Irish-based bands get a lot of airplay. The Dropkick Murphys, the Coronas, the Hardknocks and even The Coronas have all made great inroads into American mainstream consciousness. It seems like Ireland is being overrun with Irish-sounding bands, and we are all pretty okay with it. But what the hell happened to our own homegrown sounds? I've been listening to some old records recently and I've found some very interesting bands that I've never heard of before - so it's time to open your ears up. Let's meet five Irish bands who would never be played on the radio if they played in the States now. 1. Foyle's Army (Gale Force, 2005) 1-2-3-4. Foyle's Army's debut, though it sounds kind of post-hardcoreish, is actually a pretty good one with great screaming and all. The band got some good press in the UK after winning Britain's Got Talent, but "Bang Your Head" in particular, the record's breakout hit, has reached the equivalent of a regional rock radio station in the US. Only really in the most devout of fan sites or alternative radio stations. 2. The Postman (Indestructible, 2004) 3. Katies and the Tan-Maidens
