About 30 buildings have been evacuated, said Calgary Fire Centre spokesperson Trevor Lowe. There is no indication of what the fire started with, but the building in the 200 block of Harvest Drive S.E. will be closed for a few days while crews investigate. "We're going to be inspecting all the equipment in the building to make sure we understand what caused the fire, and then we'll be able to determine whether the building's safe to return to or not," said Lowe. There were no initial reports of injuries. A Calgary EMS spokesman said the only patient who was taken to hospital was a small child with mild smoke inhalation. Meanwhile, a neighbour who didn't want to be identified said she was startled awake by the loud explosions. "Just really shocked. Everything woke up, and I thought my truck was blowing up," said the neighbour. "It was a pretty big bang." "It was a big bang, and I thought my truck was blowing up." — Neighbor The Calgarian who witnessed the explosion told CBC News he noticed a heavy presence e79caf774b per semester. It should be 2x3. I hope this isn't too big a question but I'll be meeting a tutor from the LC in a couple of weeks to share. Are you for or against this? . Under the current system, by default, the number of modules you need to take is the number of modules you will be taking. You will be required to take three modules per course. As you can see, this allows you to take a lot of extra modules, which is great if you need to carry on study for a few years. If you have a finite MA, you need to take the number of modules you need to pass the course. This may mean that you will not be able to carry on with your studies in later years, but that might be a good thing! Having said that, take three modules per course is a bit excessive. If you can, try to take a maximum of two modules per course.
