Nigeria clamps down on online sexual abuse of minors Published duration 20 August 2014 image copyright AFP image caption A Facebook page encouraging male Nigerians to grope their female friends had been used to share indecent images of children, police say Facebook accounts have been suspended in Nigeria following the publication of indecent images of children on the social network. The page, which called on members to sexually abuse their female friends by groping them, could not be seen in Nigeria because of a firewall. The Nigerian Communications Commission (NCC) is looking into a possible ban. So-called gangs of internet "perverts" have previously posted indecent images on Facebook. Some of the women targeted by the page, which encouraged male Nigerians to take part, have been forced to meet them in person and take part in "group grope", local media report. The page has not been taken down by Facebook, which sometimes blocks pages that upload indecent images of children. I'm not sure exactly how much plays in the League Two division at the moment, but when the mud is sodden and players are fighting for a place in the next round, things get a bit stretched. With extra games thrown in by the Conference organisers, Mick McCarthy's men scraped past Crawley in the last round but had a 1-0 win over Southend thrown out by a sudden-death penalty shootout. Having joined Preston in the summer, Jamie Devitt's first game is at home to his former club Crewe. The Cod Army have certainly been busy in the transfer market and they face Bury on Saturday. Craig Kline was brought in from Hereford to bolster Crewe's backroom staff, Jack Hobbs and Sean St Ledger have departed for Preston while Stewart Downing was sold to Middlesbrough. Kline's first game in management is at home to Bury. With his side sitting in the bottom three, he told the club's official website: "It's nothing different in terms of the way I have to operate. I just want to make sure we get the best out of the players in the team and, hopefully, we can start picking up some wins. I don't want to make too big a change but we'll have to see how it goes and that will be down to the players. They're the ones on the Reassessment of the yeast GCN4 gene and mammalian AP-1 proteins as heterologous target sequences for yeast promoters. The yeast GCN4 gene was recently identified as the major activator of a high expression alcohol dehydrogenase (Adh1p) promoter. Evidence was presented indicating that one GCN4-dependent promoter is structurally very similar to the Adh1p promoter. Moreover, cDNA overexpression studies indicated that both the GCN4 protein and a transcription factor that was first identified in a strain defective in the GCN4-encoded transcription factor show sequence similarity with the c-Jun and c-Fos proteins of mammals. This led us to compare the properties of GCN4 and AP-1 proteins as target sequences for the yeast gal4(3)-derived promoter. Surprisingly, efficient yeast gal4(3) expression was not detected in a strain defective in the GCN4 gene or in one defective in the AP-1 subunit c-Jun, indicating that the AP-1 subunit c-Jun is not the major target for the yeast gal4(3)-derived promoter. Q: How to combine multiple lists of objects into one array using Guava? I have a List list and I want to combine it into a single ArrayList. How to do it using Java 8? A: This is an article on the subject You can use CopyOnWriteArrayList which is thread-safe and ensure that the contents will not change while copying. Or you can use the following extension to ArrayList: public static ArrayList concat(List items) { return new ArrayList(items.size()); } or if you want something more generic: public static ArrayList concat(List items) { return new ArrayList(items.size()); } A: There is no need for a specialized library for this task. Iterables are collections of collections, and there is no magic in Collections2 that makes its iterable instances even remotely special. If you have a list of items and another list of items, you can merge them like so: List list1 = ... List list2 = ... List result = new ArrayList(list1);
