Microsoft Office 2010 Professional Suite. Open Source WinCE Application Framework Library? I just started a project on building a stack of (ROM Monitor, Wallet/Ring) in WinCE 5. I've been searching around for some library that handles communicating with outside hardware, and all I can find is for Win32 and .NET. Is anyone aware of a WinCE.NET (or even Java) API that allows for such interaction? I know that there are devices available for sale that are tied to the official API, and I'm reluctant to tie my hardware to one API in particular. What would be a good library to do this? A: This is really an open question. I have seen "WinCE support" libraries from many sources. Some of these are implemented in C/C++ - some in managed C#. Some can be installed as a C/C++ exe. Some are full fledged APIs that you can build on top of. Before you sign off on using one of these libraries, make sure that there are no licensing issues or patent claims that might get you sued. Also, take a look at this sample project from Microsoft that has some ideas on how you might design the APIs for your device. I haven't gotten into the details of any of these, but the above link should give you some ideas. Q: Cannot debug Laravel 5 project with XDebug I just finished installing XDebug on my development machine. I'm new to PHP. I was trying to follow the following guide. I set all the configuration successfully. When I start my app, I can't even debug it. When I call XDebug from the command line, I get the following message: XDebug running, auto connect to IDE (usually on localhost:9000) Watching for PHP errors Watching for PHP warnings Zend Debugger is disabled Success! I am able to visit my app in the browser. This is the error I get if I visit a URL that I defined to debug the app: [Mon Jul 12 23:42:30 2013] [error] [client 127.0.0.1] PHP Fatal error: Allowed memory size of

The Palm Beach Post reports that 33-year-old Calvin Archambeau of Port St. Lucie allegedly beat on the door of a neighbor's home on Friday night and demanded to be let in, according to court documents. ADVERTISEMENT The man's wife answered the door and told him that no one was home. Archambeau insisted on entering the house, threatening to kick in the door, the Post reports. When a 66-year-old woman answered a knock on her door, Archambeau allegedly said, "Mama, do you know who it is?" The woman told Archambeau he was drunk and not welcome in her home, and he allegedly threatened to shoot her if she didn't let him inside. Archambeau then took a gun, allegedly a.38-caliber Smith and Wesson, from the jacket pocket of the homeowner's son, and pointed it at the woman, the Post reports. "The gun was pointed at the ground near her foot and she felt as if she was being threatened," the arrest affidavit reads. ADVERTISEMENT After Archambeau heard his wife scream, he told his son to take the gun away and put it in the truck. But the son's wife called 911, and Archambeau was arrested on suspicion of felony aggravated assault. The Palm Beach County Sheriff's office said Monday that Archambeau could face as many as 200 years in prison and the loss of his driver's license and his concealed weapons license. ADVERTISEMENT Archambeau was being held without bond Tuesday. Watch a report on the dispute, aired by WPTV, below.
