A pilot survey of dental practitioners in south-east Wales was carried out in order to explore the use and acceptability of preventive measures against oral and throat cancer. The survey covered dentists and dental nurses, general practitioners and practice nurses, dental hygienists, and dental therapists. An initial, predefined questionnaire was completed by a convenience sample (n=79). A follow-up questionnaire

(n=74) collected more detail regarding preventive practices and attitudes to the study. A majority of dental practitioners reported routinely discussing the prevention of mouth and throat cancer with their patients. The main reason for not discussing these topics was time constraints (84%). Dentists were more likely to recommend intensive, periodic oral hygiene (72%) than dental therapists (56%). Dental therapists reported greater knowledge and lower barriers to the use of more reliable methods of oral hygiene. There is a significant gap between the attitudes and behaviours of dental professionals and their patients regarding oral cancer prevention. The terms “All-Marine” and “All-Sea” have been used interchangeably for a long time, but, the two-line service offered by Sea-Air-Land Tours (SALT) is one of the best for snorkelers and divers alike. From the moment you board the boat, the friendly crew will introduce you to a dizzying variety of exotic marine life as you travel to the reef in search of schools of fish, sea turtles, sharks, and more. While there is no schedule or list of excursions, you will leave the excursion with friends who share a common interest and you will already have a list of places you would like to revisit, which is encouraged. The crew will be pleased to share their latest marine discoveries with you and will make daily visits to the reef to catch up and share those discoveries. Besides the location, in the heart of the Third World, the best thing about this snorkeling tour is that no visit is need to be pre-booked, e79caf774b
