Hi guys, I've just installed wordpress on my site and I'm going to start filling up my blog. How do I get it to show my images in the best way? I use the post editor already so I know I can include images. Downloaded "How to" material. I've heard of that program called Imagemagick but how do I use that to convert my images so they display in good quality? A: Use PNG instead of JPG for your full resolution images. PNG images are optimized for web use, and JPGs is typically used for saving images to your computer. Unless you have a very good reason for using a different format, go with the PNG. You can also use WordPress's built in image editor which allows you to optimize and resize images. This might be a better solution. Just dragging and dropping an image onto the editor will probably not provide the quality you need. The explosive growth of the Internet and the World Wide Web has fostered an explosion in the number of users of online commerce. The World Wide Web is a worldwide system of interconnected computers. In the early years of the World Wide Web, Internet users could access the Internet either through telco or cable networks or through telephone companies. More recently, many telephone companies have allowed their customers Internet access or have set up dedicated lines to allow customers Internet access. Customers who have Internet access may access the World Wide Web through the Internet or through the telephone company system. Internet users often use World Wide Web based browsers for communication over the World Wide Web. This type of communication is sometimes referred to as WWW browsing or WWW browsing. The terms WWW browsing and WWW browsing are used interchangeably. WWW browsing typically includes browsing the World Wide Web, for example, using a web browser and it is used in the context of the present patent application and in the claims. WWW browsing is a client-server type technology that distributes and delivers web pages over the Internet. The HTML documents are treated as hypertext documents which are displayed within the computer's browser. A browser is a software program that understands certain protocols that are used to request web pages. The browser reads the HTML codes of the web pages and then displays the web pages in a hypertext format. The browser also renders the hypertext based on the style in which it is written. Browsers typically display the content in two windows. In the first window, the content is displayed and in the second
