Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a liquid crystal display device, and more particularly, to a reflective liquid crystal display device in which a polarized light reflecting sheet is used as a pixel electrode, in which light is made incident from a side opposite to a viewing side and transmitted and/or reflected, and the light is used for display. 2. Discussion of the Related Art An active matrix type liquid crystal display (LCD) device is advantageous in terms of the characteristics of display (image display such as high resolution and high quality, low voltage and low power consumption) and the characteristics of a driving circuit (thin, lightweight, high reliability) and has been used in a wide variety of fields. The active matrix type LCD device has a plurality of switching elements formed in a matrix, each pixel including one pixel electrode connected to a respective one of the switching elements. In a twisted nematic (TN) type LCD device, for example, the LCD device is driven in a way that liquid crystal molecules in a liquid crystal layer are twist-aligned
