Each year brings a raft of great racing on the roads of Northern Ireland and even if you are not a keen racer it can be a great sport to follow. Northern Ireland gives up to 40mph slower than the national average in some areas, but it provides a great road scene with some fabulous scenery. We've selected some of the best roads for driving in Northern Ireland to enjoy. Roads with interesting history Derrylin Carrigtwohill The Causeway Coast Glendevon Rallying is a big part of the sporting scene in Northern Ireland and you can drive an assortment of interesting rallies on these roads. Northern Ireland has some wonderful Scottish forest scenery and these roads enjoy the best of both worlds. To the dismay of some the Glen Fork is best enjoyed on the slow side, but it's worth getting into the spirit and driving fast on the fast roads, just make sure you don't take too many hairpin bends too early. Northern Ireland's roads are built to transport heavy vehicles, but if you want a weekend of fun driving, these roads are perfect. Giant's Causeway The Glens Holywood The gorges of the Glens are made for on-road action - they are challenging, steep and require full concentration. The Glens are some of the most intriguing roads in Northern Ireland - they are steep, narrow and require the patience of a saint to negotiate but the payoff is worth it. In the city of Belfast, the coastal road is one of the best places to enjoy the beauty of Northern Ireland's coastline. Inner Relief Line Inner Relief Line Portrush One of the reasons why tourists visit Northern Ireland is for its stunning coastline. Some of the best beaches in the world are located here.
