Notification Mobile home, manufactured housing moving into new stage Prairie Pines' mobile homes and manufactured housing will be turned into buildings, while some of those in need will be moved into a local church's basement. In November, the City Council agreed to hire a firm to move manufactured housing units owned by the U.S. Housing Authority into new buildings and to provide housing for the homeless, said Doug Beaudoin, an employee at Prairie Pines. "We're going to be a great (mobile home) park again," said Beaudoin, who works at Prairie Pines' maintenance shop. "Instead of the old S&H Green Fools will be the new Con-X again." In 2009, Prairie Pines' S&H Green Fools were moved out of the park and the site was re-developed into a public-private recreational facility called Prairie Pines Athletic Park. This year, Beaudoin said, the city will hire a company to move 180 manufactured homes in Prairie Pines into a new shopping plaza. Some of the homes will be moved to storage lots to wait for prices to rebound and to be sold. The rest will be housed in mobile home and manufactured housing parks. To house the homeless who are displaced by the manufactured housing moves, the city has lined up a vacant church in Prairie Pines that has space for 40 people and has 150 beds available. The rooms will be rented at $80 a night, said Paul Kamelder, the city's administrative services division manager, adding that it will be a short-term solution until the homeless can find housing. "It's good enough for me, as long as it's temporary," said Taunya Taylor, a 35-year resident of Prairie Pines. "It's a good chunk of (a) move. There's a lot of stuff going on and I'm grateful." Taylor had recently lived in a manufactured home in the park, but it is 6d1f23a050
