reactions is investigated. The decomposition is applied to studies of the thermodynamics of the reactions using a physical approach. A reformulation of the thermodynamic model in the physical domain is proposed. A solvatochromic parameter, the two-variable affinities for potentials (2-VAPs), is introduced. This parameter is related to the frontier orbital energies for the reactants, intermediates, and products. It is shown that the reformulated model is consistent with the traditional one. It is also shown that the new model is applicable to open-system kinetics using the concept of the input and output flows. The reformulated model is 6d1f23a050
