What do you think about Wazir? Please post your comments, views and feedback. "I think it is probably the No. 1 issue of our time," said New York City Councilman David Greenfield, an ardent proponent of mayoral candidate Bill de Blasio. It's hard to disagree. I conducted a straw poll of City Council members this week, and found that the majority of elected officials were either for or against same-sex marriage. I'm not bothered by that. The same people who are for gay marriage are generally pro-choice, so the big issue for them isn't what we call marriages, but the freedom of choice. But both are about liberty. Same-sex marriage proponents believe same-sex couples should have the same freedom to be married that straight couples have had for the past two hundred years. (That's why the United States Supreme Court decided, in 2003, that states cannot ban marriages between heterosexuals.) The opponents of same-sex marriage don't think two people who choose not to have children should have the same right to be married. Their answer is: well, we don't really want to be married because the state won't recognize it. The gay marriage proponents say that isn't good enough, and that everyone should be treated the same as couples who are able to have babies. That's an issue that both sides would be willing to accept being deadlocked on -- and for good reason.

The right to marry is, more than anything, a matter of liberty. The same thing is true of the right to abortion. Whether we have children or not, we are still in a state of gestation, so it's a matter of freedom of choice. But in addition to being about liberty, abortion is about bodily autonomy. If I'm pregnant and I don't want to be, it's my right to choose whether to terminate my pregnancy. We call it a right to choose. If you're not pro-choice, you don't think it's really a choice at all, since it's your body that the fetus is inhabiting. But most pro-choicers don't believe abortion is murder. It's not. (A baby at the moment of birth is fully human. Any later stage of life is not.) If a fetus is a part of me, then the way we choose to kill it in the womb is immaterial. The opponents of abortion aren't all that interested in 6d1f23a050
