The templates provided in visual studio 2010 are old, and I want to create a project without using a database as I don't need one. A: I think this is what you are after: A: Unfortunately, after re-installing my machine as a Mac, I can't get the Visual Studio 2010 templates to work. So I went a little more low level with the following (which was suggested in the answers to this question): The results are shown as a new item on the solution's main menu - but when you open it in VS2010 it disappears and you need to re-enter the solution name. I was able to get it working on my Mac by making a slight modification to the above URL, adding the trailing slash and making the file extension.ip I'm sure there's a cleaner way of doing this, but this does the trick for now.

Hi Rakesh, I'm downloading this plugin now, I'm sure you will find some good sounds from it. By the way, what are you using to run this plugin?I'm using DirectX 9 because it is free. I'm downloading it now.. thanks Jitendra for the help. Hi Einar, Dude, I just downloaded the plugin and have added it to my plugin toolbar. I hope you will not mind me asking, how did you add it to your toolbar, exactly? Will you be able to reply to this question here, or do you prefer pm? Thanks. IMPORTANT NOTE: Please do not try to use a plugin only plugin, it is basically a dll file, which should only be used in a NAPACK project. Do not create a NAPACK project and place a dll in it. The size of this plugin is 1.96 MB compressed, but the original size is 4.12 MB. The compressed file will probably install as a library to your System32 folder. The uncompressed file will install as part of your VSTi plugin folder. I suggest you copy the file to your VSTi plugin folder. Another download site Hi Rahks, What is the VSTi plugin you mentioned there? Can I download the soundbank from that site? In 1.0.0.0, the link to the soundbank is broken.
