The chemopreventive properties of phenobarbital are well known and are thought to be mediated by its thiohydroxylated metabolite, 3-hydroxyphenobarbital. To assess the contribution of the sulfenic acid and disulfide to the overall anti-neoplastic effects of phenobarbital, the metabolic profile of 2-3% barbital was examined. Our results, when compared with phenobarbital, are consistent with the creation of a sulfenic acid (barbital-sulfenic acid) and disulfide (barbital-disulfide) in addition to the thiohydroxylated sulfoxide (barbital-sulfoxide) and sulfone (barbital-sulfone). In the presence of an excess of cysteine, metabolism of barbital generates a stoichiometry of 2 sulfenate (barbital-disulfide) per barbital. Since approximately 1 sulfenate (barbital-sulfenic acid) exists per barbital, these results suggest that phenobarbital causes the creation of a more chemopreventive sulfenic acid than the thiohydroxylated sulfoxide.The fashion-conscious Governor boasts the world's most-watched Twitter account Photo: Twitter Aau... who am I kidding?
