From the pleadings filed, the proofs taken, and the charges, it is plain that the contract for the sale of the property was entered into on or about the 23rd of July, 1880, and that no promise of a conveyance of the land was made by the grantor to the grantee, or in his behalf. The part of the charge made to the jury by the judge upon this branch of the case, could not be understood as importing to the jury the legal presumption that the sale was made, as alleged. It is very plain that the jurors understood, and would have understood, what was meant by such charge, if it had been made on this point. But the charge, in substance, was to the effect that the jury had no right to presume that, even if the sale had been made, it was without consideration. This charge, considering the state of the pleadings, and the statements of the counsel, in the arguments to 6d1f23a050
