But the problem is only in IE. If I'm in Chrome or Firefox the image show itself. But in IE the image is cut in the right side and also in the left side. Here's the code: New Image var canvas = document.getElementById('canvas'); var context = canvas.getContext('2d'); var img = new Image(); img.src = ""; function cropImage(){ context.clearRect(0, 0, canvas.width, canvas.height); var ratio = canvas.width / img.width; var canvasWidth = canvas.width; var canvasHeight = canvas.height; context.drawImage(img, 0, 0, canvasWidth, canvasHeight,

This invention relates to apparatus used for applying a liquid material to a textile surface, and more particularly to an apparatus for applying a liquid material to the surface of a laundry softener article such as a softener sheet. More particularly, this invention relates to an apparatus for applying a liquid material to the surface of a laundry softener article such as a softener sheet. In many cases, the softener sheet is a sheet of softening material that is attached to a porous backing strip so as to comprise an extended sheet of softening material having a porous backing. This softener sheet typically has a top and bottom surface and may comprise one or more subcomponents. For example, one softening sheet may be used to form a compactible softening sheet such as sold under the registered trademark "Love Soft", while another may be used to form a noncompactible sheet such as sold under the registered trademark "Love Hard". Each of these sheets typically has a top and bottom surface and may comprise a single sheet or a plurality of subcomponents. For example, these subcomponents may comprise a top web, a bottom web and a core formed of a nonwoven fabric, a powdered perfumed material, a meltblown perfumed material, etc. The top web and bottom web can be sealed to a laminate so as to have top and bottom surfaces. The top surface of the top web and the bottom surface of the bottom web are sealed together to form a solidified structure, and the two are typically cut to form the softener sheets. The function of inhibition in depression: a clinical hypothesis. Depression has been described as a disease of high inhibition, but this hypothesis has recently come under scrutiny. In the present paper, an alternative hypothesis is proposed in which depression reflects either an increase or decrease in inhibition. The description of the problem of depression is adapted from a conceptual framework proposed by Nesse (1997), which includes the functions of congruence, control, and self-control.

The hypothesis is based on studies examining the effects of a change in mood on emotional reactivity in depressed people and on the ability of depressed people to regulate emotion. An increase in depressive mood was found to correspond to increased emotional reactivity, as measured by skin conductance, in a group of depressed people. The ability of depressed people to regulate their emotional arousal was 6d1f23a050
