'/rdp70downloadwindows7/{print $NF}' file Toxicological and haematological evaluation of triflumezole (TFZ) in male and female rats. Triflumezole (TFZ), a systemic fungicide belonging to the class of triazole, was administered orally to Sprague-Dawley rats at doses of 0, 5, 10, 30 and 60 mg/kg of body weight for 28 days. Rats were observed for haematological, biochemical and pathological alterations. TFZ caused a significant decrease in total erythrocyte count, haemoglobin and packed cell volume in a dose-dependent manner. Leucocyte count was increased to a maximum after 5 days of treatment, whereas platelet count remained unaffected. A significant decrease in packed cell volume was observed in male rats.

Haematological data showed an increase in the neutrophil/lymphocyte ratio in all the treatment groups.

Erythrocyte lipid peroxidation, plasma ALT, plasma urea and serum electrolytes were also increased with a dose dependent trend. The administration of TFZ caused marked changes in the liver and kidney, and above the dose of 30 mg/kg, these changes reached their maximum values, and these changes were more marked in the male rats. The observed haematological and biochemical alterations are the result of toxicities due to TFZ treatment. The results obtained in this study suggest that, TFZ treatment can produce toxicological changes in blood cells, and also cause some damage to the kidney, liver, lungs and spleen in rats.hi, how many of you are out there? and how about anyone else interested in doing finance on the btays! let me know. m

08.04.2018 11:22 Very interesting topic but I don't know much about it. I did however expertise some of the issues you have talked about, as the offline mode of MSN, although exceptionally useful, can certainly be frustrating when using with a less smart phone. Sr.Sr
