How can I post a video tutorial in this community? A: to answer the How can I post a video tutorial in this community? question: You can submit a video tutorial by posting a link to it on YouTube. The video should be from your computer and should be between 2 minutes and 20 minutes in length.

The poster should then post the video in the community in the instructions section, but not in the answer section. Please read the Youtube video tutorial guidelines. Then the site displays all the users who are most active, and the oldest user gets lots of gold stars: Some of the features of the site are: Users can nominate other users and videos, and they receive a gold star. Users can vote to remove other users and videos. Users can vote to close threads. Users can edit their own questions and answers. Users can edit posts. Users can comment on posts. Users can report posts to Stack Exchange. Users who are new to the site can give a starting vote. Users can tag their posts, or enter tags that other users can use to find them. Users can find information about Stack Exchange from the About page. Users can set custom noticeboards. Users can set custom privileges. Users can create custom filters. Users can set custom favourites. Users who have an account on other Stack Exchange sites, and some other sites, can use their accounts on those sites to login to SE sites (the "Stack Exchange Network"). Nowadays there are video sites where one can ask one's questions and post one's answers. Other kinds of videos, such as tutorial videos, can be found on YouTube. Other sites, such as Whose line is it, anyway? have a chat forum where users can ask questions and/or post videos.
