it is recommended to use a firmware flash drive that has been securely formatted before being used to transfer your important data. before you run the program, ensure to turn off the computer. open file explorer by clicking the folder icon on the windows 10 taskbar. click the view tab shown directly below. then press the options button to open the window shown directly below. select the show hidden files option. press the apply button. click the ok button to close the window. wow! i did not think a 1.00 read error would cause so much trouble, and a 1.00 write error would only corrupt a few bytes but not delete files. i tried to use another windows device to transfer the files over, but after a few seconds of transferring the transfer rates dropped to an unacceptable level. i had over 1.3 gb's of data. i was not able to even copy a fraction of it over to the new usb (only a few hundred mb's). i then tried to use the format option to overwrite the file with a new one, and it still would not work. i then tried to copy the files over in the 'end-end' mode so to speak (from the bottom to the top of the list) using another device, and that had the same result. so in fear that i might not be able to get any more of my files over to the new stick, i format the old stick with the format option and the file size is now down to 544 mb, which i am pretty sure it is smaller than it was originally. for your reference, it is a kingston datatraveler usb 3.0 series 4 gb of data at 3.2 mb/s. it is a kingston datatraveler gt solid state drive, model: 8gdcm01kb.
