
Scorecleaner Notes Apk

When you first load up Score Creator, you're presented with the familiar Windows — interface. It's clean, and a subtle grey-blue. A quick mouse-over reveals colour-coded note groups, and a soft blue line is pulled across the space between them. A few notes within the right-hand side of the screen show the number of notes in each voice, the duration of the note and (if you choose to use it) a plus (+) sign. By default, all of the voices in the score are connected. In addition to this, there's a distinct blue line at the bottom of the screen which can be dragged to extend or reduce the notes per page.

You can also drag a note onscreen to move it. If you tap on the G4 note in the score, the second voice is automatically enabled and available for soloing. If you tap it again, the note is deleted. The first of the two taps marks G4 as a high note, and the second tap marks it as an open string. All of the data for the different voices (duration, note count, open/close status) is displayed above the note. Tap on the G1 and G3 notes to select them respectively. While you can select notes, you won't be able to edit the duration yet. Tap the G4 note again, and it will turn blue to indicate the open string. While the G4 note has played, the blue line descends to indicate the chord is being played. Drag the blue line to extend the bar, or drag the G1, G3, G4 notes off-screen to delete them. Tap the G3 again, and it will turn back to black to indicate that it's closed. Tap the G2 note to delete it. The second voice is automatically selected. All of the data for the different voices (duration, note count, open/close status) is displayed above the note.

I think this is a useful feature to determine the details in the notehead without having to zoom in on individual notes. The lower end of the whistling does not look as clean as the upper end, because of the whistle's higher pitch (more of a whistle really). The difference is that the whistle sound was clearer, producing a more modern sound. The whistle, like all musical instruments, will have different timbres depending on the pitch (as well as the technique). Whistles have an internal range of frequencies that are sometimes treated as diatonic, sometimes chromatic and others homorhythmic. The click track can be turned off and on by using a toggle button on the toolbar. Once you have set the playback rate (by default 105), you can move the notes to the next track by moving them to the next track, or in the reverse direction by using the Move To Track function.

Remember to hold down the CTRL key. All in-built tools such as the Piano Roll Editor and Track Sheet make Scorecleaner Notes far more useful than one would expect it to be. In the Track Sheet there is a dedicated button to change playback Rate (by default 105), by which tempo of playback can be controlled. I tried playing with the Sparsity parameter. I found with a Sparsity of -20% that most of the rests were removed and the semiquavers were shortened, making the semiquavers look shorter. A Sparsity of 0% has more noise on the notes; a Sparsity of 25% looks relatively quiet, but you can still hear the notes. At 50% you can barely hear the notes. I found the Sparsity parameter works quite well, but you have to experiment for the correct value.
